“ Momma, this has been so hard on me but I know you are in a way better place than here. I have watched you over the years, struggling with your health and it has broken my heart. I will miss you calling me and asking "We're going for a ride, you wanna come?" I will miss asking how you are doing every time I saw you, I will miss asking dad about you. Our last day together will always be my most cherished memory of you. How we laughed so much and you said your last "I love you" to me. We had an amazing 2 hours together and you didn't even know that I brought over your anniversary gift from dad. I hate that you wouldn't touch it until I moved all your files from your old computer and I didn't know if you would like the new mouse that I picked out. I know you are here because I have seen YOU in so many strangers. I promise you one thing, I will do my best to continue your legacy. I don't know how but I will. And of course you know I along with all your kids and grandkids are going to take care of dad. You know that of course. I love you momma and see you later!

“A smile which quite literally lit the room up, an infectious laugh, and the capability to make any guest feel most sincerely welcome at the wonderful gatherings atop “Toth Ridge” are but a smattering of qualities possessed by Fran.

“Feisty,” as she has been described? But of course! It’s highly probable that is one of the many qualities which attracted Lew to Fran in the beginning. But to anyone else who had both the enjoyment and honor to know her and immensely relish spending time with her as did I, she further possessed a profound sweetness not often encountered elsewhere. As the “self-appointed comedian” at a few of the many gatherings at the Toth home, Fran was my best “audience” as she was always the easiest one to crack completely up with my corny jokes and antics. I always knew when I was doing a good job with my “one-liners” when she’d laugh so hard she’d have a wee-bit of a coughing fit. ...and a heartfelt compliment from one hillbilly chef to another; Fran could SLING some delightful and heavenly vittles, which was always a justified excuse to eat too much at cookouts & meals.

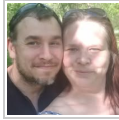

I am occasionally asked by others “Do you have any regrets in life?” I now would have to answer “Yes. I regret not taking more time to spend with both Fran, and Lew,” and full-well intend to play catch-up with Lew on my next trip north from deep in “The Dixie Tropics” of Florida.

My life has been made richer by the time which I have been able to spend in Fran’s presence, and the world has been improved upon as a result of her existence, her goodness, her graciousness and her kindness. May those of you closest to her, and grieving the most rely upon the endless great memories of your lives with Fran to help you get through this challenging time.

My additional “life regret” is that Lynli & I were not able to make the long journey from Florida to pay our respects and to offer support in the form of in-person words of kindness, and of course, suffocating, bone-crunching bear hugs on my part.

May you all persevere in navigating through the coming days of missing such a delightful woman. Lynli & I are immensely proud to have had the privilege to know and love her.

“Fran and I grew up together in Petersburg, Michigan. We knew each other all our lives. If I remember correctly, we got in trouble together a few times in our younger days. I remember when I moved away, she came and visited me a couple of times. We lost touch for a long time. I am so glad we were able to reconnect. I will miss her, but I have some great memories. RIP, my friend.”

“ A strange but close relationship we had. We married each others ex husband's many years ago. I will say she got the better deal. We did like to poke fun at each other, and I loved sending her the blonde jokes, and I know she had a smile. Fran was a very giving person and had a way about her that just made you want to be her friend. I will miss her. I think God knew she had a hard road ahead of her and took her home before she had to go thru anymore. God will bless her. RIP my dear friend.
