“ When Grover and my mother married, over 20 years ago, he treated me like I was one of his own, he never really called me a stepdaughter. He loved my mother and she loved him. We shared many good times together over the years, and tears as well. In the four years since my mother's death, we have kept in touch, sometimes we'd talk on the phone for a couple of hours. He never forgot my birthday, even though he hated the day as it's the same day his own father died, in 1950. I loved him, plain and simple. We were the only ones in the room the night my mother died, and that formed a special bond. Although neither me or my brother or son are mentioned in the obituary, we were a part of his life. I know we are all richer for having known Grover, and having him in our lives. He was there to comfort me when my daddy died, then later when my cat died. I buried her at their house and we had a little funeral for her. It's the little things that bring about such fond memories. I've missed him terribly these last four years while he was living in Memphis, and now I'll forever hold him in my heart. He was a good husband to my mother, a good stepfather to me and my brother and a good step grandfather to my son, for that I am eternally grateful. Rest in peace dear Grover-until we meet again ❤️
