“ If I were to share memories, I would be here all day long. My Dad was there for literally everything. I can't quite put into words just how much I miss him. I am heartbroken over the loss of my Dad. But I can literally hear his voice telling me to wipe the tears away and smile while remembering the good times. And that is exactly what I will do. I love you so much, old man. I wish you were still here, but I know it was your time to go. Until we meet again...

“ I grew up with Rob he lived behind me . I could jump my fence I was in his yard. We had alot of great times with him. My brother Brad Thompson was his child hood friend. They had some many good times together. Rob was waiting till the day the could be around my brother. I remember when i was a little girl and rob and me and my brother went around Egg ppl house. We thought he was so fun but wasnt because we had to go wash it off people house. Rob was just at my house not to long ago and was so happy about his life. His life will be remembered in so many was. “ How can I possibly choose just one memory to share of my beloved big brother? There are so many. And while some of my favorites are from childhood (like the time he helped pull me from a freezing cold creek after I fell in while sledding), I think my heart is very full with the joy I hold from more recent memories made. After our Daddy died, Rob and I established a strong relationship as we navigated the loss. I will forever cherish our long talks, our meals shared, and the phone calls. I never shied away from having honest conversation with Rob, and it hurts knowing he is no longer here. I know Rob lives on in all of us, and my heart is with our family as we adjust to Rob being in heaven instead of here with us.
