“ Sometimes the universe connects you with an amazing soul and that happened to me sitting at Glen and Randy's breakfast table in New Orleans many years ago - when I first met Vicki- we quickly discovered we had much in common including not only our love for music and Nola but also being almost neighbors in Brooklyn with living only a few miles apart - Vicki was smart and vivacious- she exuded positive energy and touched everyone she met with love and enthusiasm. My heart aches for her soul mate Lee and her daughter Chelsea as well as her incredible krewe of friends - we had not seen each other since pre pandemic and I am so sorry for that - sending love and hugs to you all as you celebrate today a life gone too soon - somehow I can picture Vicki looking down at everyone from above- smiling down and sending rays of light as she is free from pain. This one hurts - peace to all who mourn our friend Vicki.

“ I met Vicki and Lee 18 yrs ago when I became their dog sitter. I fell in love with Scamp, the beagle, and became social friends with Lee and Vicki. We went to movies. showd, meals, the beach. Eventually 2 more beagles were to join the McCabes; Lucy, then Max. Vicki had such a good photographic eye, and I felt like I was on vacation with them, when they went cross country in an RV and brought the dogs too, by following along with her picture journey. Vicki used all 5 senses to experience life to the fullest...see. touch, taste, smell and feel everything, everywhere. From jazz festival in New Orleans to stays at Macinack Island, Vicki loved music, art, scenery, music, books, etc. She was a spit fire, tough and a free spirit. Beat to her own drum. Completely unique and fearless. She drank in every ounce of life with passion and childlike wonderment. She was a big spirit in this world. Her flame so strong and bright, it can never burn out. Goodbye sweet Vicki. Play with all the dogs in heaven now and frolick on the other side with the same gusto you did here on earth. Rest in peace, dear soul.

“ Vicki's energy and love for life and beauty is inspirational. Her creativity, passion and energy was infectious. She made an impression everywhere she went. And her facebook posts were always entertaining. I loved her the first moment I met her, and to me she was fun, feisty and fabulous. We did not see enough arthouse films we wanted to. Life is way too short. I will miss you Vicki. You have left a big hole in Nashville for sure.

“ Our wonderful time on Mackinac for John and Kelly's wedding, the visit at Thanksgiving with Chelsea and the pups as we all gathered on our hill, and waving goodbye as the camper headed on down that hill heading home after the Great Western Adventure. How I will miss theFB posts that kept us all in touch❤️
