“ The news of Billy’s passing was one of those somber and dispiriting announcements which just took the wind right outta my sails this morning.

Although my time actually working alongside him was rather limited throughout my career, I always looked forward to those opportunities. Billy was genuine, intelligent, fierce when the situation dictated it, and a most efficiently-calculating predator of those dark souls who walk the earth with the sole daily mission of doing harm to, and taking from others. As with many of us who found law enforcement to be our true calling, Billy possessed a healthy, productive, and appropriate moral hatred of the criminal element, which drove him to make the streets of Davidson County a most hostile environment in which to commit evil acts. In other words, he had a “nose” like that of a bloodhound which culminated with the capture, and both short and long-term removal from society of many an “deserving” offender.

Billy left this earth, in-particular that portion of it known as Nashville, a better place than that which he entered at birth. For all of these reasons, we owe him the debt of great respect, and to not allow our memories of him to fade. May the almighty shelter his soul in everlasting peace.
